

VGI

We build WEB sites that put you in control

Our WEB sites are custom designed for the client. If you already have a design you want to utilize we will translate your design to a WEB site for you and offer possible enhancements for your consideration. Or if you prefer VGI employees will discuss your company and your particular needs, likes and dislikes and prepare a proposed WEB design for your consideration. We will review the proposed design with your organization make the changes you request and again review the proposal with your organization.

VGI always provides its clients with the ability to maintain the informational areas of the WEB site. This design process allows your organization to quickly update the WEB's information without involving a WEB designer or programmer in the process. Ability to update the informational sections of your WEB site is by granted privilege assigned and controlled by you; thus you need not worry about unauthorized changes being made to the WEB site. A prior knowledge of a word or text processing program is all that is required of your employee to take advantage of the user-maintain information design of your WEB site. Any employee possessing these skills can be trained in less than ten minutes on the process required to maintain information of their section(s) of your WEB site.

User maintenance of the WEB site information does not physical update the WEB site. VGI provides a utility to your organization that performs the actual update of the WEB site. The utility can be setup to allow a final edit and approval before actually updating the WEB site or the utility can update the WEB site without this additional safeguard; the choice is yours and what best meets your organization's need.
